

CASE STUDY

A passport for keeping track of clinical competencies

Compassly is a simple but powerful app that lets clinical leaders easily assess the skills of their teams live on a smartphone or tablet, to help ensure that healthcare professionals have the right skills to care for their patients.

It reduces wasted time and effort on paper assessments and gives complete evidence and assurance to clinical leaders. Supporting a consistently high standard of professional development, it helps with staff motivation and retention. It improves staff clinical competencies, reduces unwarranted variation, and leads to improvements in patient safety and experience.

What we did:

Compassly were part of our 2023 cohort for the East Midlands Digital Health Accelerator programme.

We supported Compassly by providing a series of masterclasses, useful to early stage innovators looking to deploy within the health service.

Health Innovation East Midlands provided Compassly with a number of showcasing opportunities and helped to engage stakeholders from a range of local organisations in a community of interest group to talk about challenges recording competencies locally.

Outcomes: Health Innovation East Midlands continues to work with Compassly to highlight opportunities within our region. We are keen to offer evaluation support to deployments that arise within our region.

Compassly was first developed working alongside an NHS Trust in the East Midlands, and a key part of its strength is empowering collaboration between local NHS organisations – so we see working alongside Health Innovation East Midlands as a perfect fit.” Jonathan Knight, Compassly
