

NHS Expo 2 September 2015 – Pop-up University 10, 3pm.

Innovation from, and by the Frontline

Additional comments from the session were also noted down:

Opportunity to think outside the box Great way to hear others ideas/thoughts Rachel was Awesome!! AHSN's are great
Revisit previous ideas Use the three areas Make sure roll out is accessible
Explanations of AHSNs
Good to hear everyone's views on innovation
Thanks for the window cleaner and the pen
Translational strategy How do we spread the word?
I was inspired by the person sitting next to me who has a good innovation strategy at their trust – SW Yorkshire
Helpful to understand a bit more about the AHSN Happy to share paper I wrote for barriers to innovation if felt would add value to your ongoing work. Also out innovation strategy (addressing some of the findings)
I've innovated the NHS Choices equivalent for children (healthierkids.co.uk) and young people (healthierteens.co.uk) co-designed by 100 children and young people and our school nurses. Would like to disseminate across country – included webchats, games, quizzes etc.
Barriers include: funding mechanisms within NHS Enabler: Extend and promote personal health budgets to encourage innovation from people and their cares
Fun and pragmatic approach to innovation We want to set up an innovation 'hub' in adults social care, advice welcome!
Lessons and key thoughts taking away Importance of patient being point of innovation Importance of utilising AHSN
Listening to responses of others Overview of AHSN Importance of sharing Importance of communicating

Ideas and response of others – education
Loved this session – thank you!! Especially: content, process, context
Take risks, involve patients in innovations
We (the fire service) are trying to reposition to be a health asset as we know that the things that make people increased risk of fire are health issues (poor memory, poor mobility etc.). Would the AHSNs be interested in working with us to prove it can be done?
Knowing that there are other organisations where we can call to help us innovate
We need to make sure we stop reinventing the wheel. How do we know what's already out there – 100's of apps, e-learning tools, similar services with multiple evaluations, devices – need a way of knowing what is out there NHS trusts will struggle to go to the colab portal, every AHSN, the NHS apps library – there is no time – need to make it easier or we will waste money.
Learning Dementia patient's brightly coloured cooker timer – great idea – how to activate is key!!
Good presentation and sharing of definitions My challenge as senior manager for innovation and improvement at Salford CCG is to engage practices to see their very often everyday ideas and practices as something which is innovative. Your mnemonic will be of some use!
Brightly coloured egg timer man (example from practice) The charm and charisma of main speaker
